Edgemont History

On November 2, 1889 South Dakota was admitted to the Union of the United States. As the railroad moved northwest, it crept across the northwest and reached the Cheyenne River. The Lincoln Land Company, a subsidiary of the Chicago, Burlington and Missouri Railroads, decided that this was the perfect place for the new town which would be the home of the Railroad. Because the price of the land set by the owner, Mr. Fitch was so high, the land company was forced to purchase land south of then river. In the spring of 1890, the depot and railroad yards were built and the town of Edgemont was born. The name Edgemont was derived from the fact that the town was located on the southern edge of the Black Hills Mountains.

The first ten years of Edgemont's history recorded rapid growth. As this was expected to be the manufacturing city of the new "Northwest", a 14 mile irrigation canal was constructed, houses were built in Edgemont proper and a quarry was built at the mouth of Red Canyon for the manufacturing of grindstones. The first church erected in town was the Presbyterian Church built around 1892. It was located in the area now occupied by the United Church. The Methodist Church followed in Cottonwood in 1896. The Catholics bought the La Casa Opera House and remodeled it into a church. In 1898, a large stone school was erected to replace the smaller school due to an enrollment of 81. In the late nineties, Edgemont experienced serious trouble. Eastern Capitol was no longer available, the dam at the Cheyenne River washed out, the Edgemont Company went broke, much of the business district was wiped out due to fire and an outbreak of typhoid and smallpox hit the area, all of which was overshadowed by the great depression.

At this time, Edgemont became a railroad and cow town as the regional economy was vested in livestock. In 1903, Edgemont was host to President Teddy Roosevelt. From the bandstand that still stands in the city park, president Teddy Roosevelt addressed the crowd. From his vantage point, the President was able to see a wagon covered with a canvas top; a chuck wagon. As the story goes, the president went out to eat and visit with the riders at the chuck wagon while his party dined with the ladies at the stone block building which stood until late 2002.

Since then, Edgemont has seen numerous times of change; from economic prosperity to decline. At present, Edgemont is the home of the south end (mile marker 0.0) of the Mickelson trail, a bike/horse/hiking trail created from the track site of the old railroad stretching from Edgemont to Lead.

Edgemont remains primarily a ranch town and the home to the Edgemont Depot of the Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railroad.

Local railroad employees participate in UTU strike

0 Reads

The United Transportation Union voluntarily ended a short strike against BNSF Railway on Wednesday, April 27, at the urging of a federal judge who agreed to act expeditiously on UTU's motion for a preliminary injunction.

The work stoppage affected only the former Burlington Northern (BN) Railroad portion of BNSF and no the former Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe Railway (ATSF) portion of the carrier. BN and ATSF merged in 1992. About 8,000 UTU-represented BNSF employees were on strike on the former BN portion of BNSF. Represents 125000 active and retired railroad, bus and mass transit workers in the United States and Canada.

The UTU work stoppage was in response to BNSF's unilateral change to a UTU agreement.

Section 3 of Article XIII of the UTU 1985 national agreement provides that engineers with train-service seniority can only use that seniority if they cannot hold an engineer's position. The BNSF violated the status quo under that agreement this month by permitting engineers, who could hold an engineer position, to remain in train service.

Focus on People: Nancy Cadwell

How do you see Nancy Cadwell? I think of her as a young widow lady and talented artist--soft spoken but strong. This week she finally decided that if she'd let me write a Focus on her, I'd leave her alone! So Saturday I sat her down and made her tell me some of her story. Nancy Snyder was born in Newcastle, WY. Her father worked in a refinery there. She and three brothers and one sister attended school in Newcastle until she was through 11th grade. That year

On 2 January 1942 the U.S. War Department established Rapid City Army Air Base as a training location for B-17 Flying Fortress crews. From September 1942--when its military runways first opened--until mission needs changed in July 1945, the field's instructors taught thousands of pilots, navigators, radio operators and gunners from nine heavy bombardment groups and numerous smaller units. All training focused on the Allied drive to overthrow the Axis powers in Europe.

After World War II the base briefly trained weather reconnaissance and combat squadrons using P-61 Black Widow, P-38 Lightning, P-51 Mustang, and B-25 Mitchell aircraft. Those missions soon ended, however, and Rapid City Army Air Field temporarily shut down from September 1946 - March 1947. When operations resumed in 1947 the base was a new United States Air Force asset. The primary unit assigned to Rapid City Air Force Base was the new 28th Bombardment Wing (BMW) flying the B-29 Superfortress.

The installation changed names a few more times during its early years. In January 1948, Air Force Chief of Staff Gen Carl A. Spaatz renamed it Weaver Air Force Base in honor of Brig Gen Walter R. Weaver, one of the pioneers in the development of the Air Force. In June of that year, however, in response to overwhelming public appeals, Secretary of the Air Force Stuart Symington returned it to its previous name. The base was also declared a "permanent installation" in early 1948.

Shortly after additional runway improvements, in July 1949, the 28 BMW began conversion from B-29s to the huge B-36 Peacemaker. In April 1950 the Air Staff reassigned the base from 15th Air Force to 8th Air Force.

The base experienced one of its worst peacetime tragedies in March 1953 when an RB-36 and its entire crew of 23 crashed in Newfoundland while returning from a routine exercise in Europe. On 13 June 1953, President Dwight D. Eisenhower made a personal visit to dedicate the base in memory of Brig Gen Richard E. Ellsworth, commander of the 28th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing, who lost his life in that accident.

Military organizations periodically upgrade manpower and machines from time to time to meet new national security requirements. Ellsworth Air Force Base's organizations were no exception. Headquarters Strategic Air Command (SAC) reassigned the 28 BMW from 8th Air Force back to 15th Air Force in October 1955. Approximately one year later, SAC set plans in motion to replace the 28th's B-36s with the new all-jet B-52 Stratofortress. The last B-36 left Ellsworth on 29 May 1957 and the first B-52 arrived sixteen days later. In 1958 all base units came under the command of the 821st Strategic Aerospace Division, headquartered at Ellsworth.

In October 1960, Ellsworth entered the "Space Age," with the activation of the 850th Strategic Missile Squadron, initially assigned to the 28 BMW. For more than a year this squadron prepared for the emplacement of Titan I intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBM), which finally arrived in 1962, shortly after the activation of the 44th Strategic Missile Wing (SMW) in January. At that time Headquarters SAC also named the 44 SMW as host wing at Ellsworth.

Titan's life span was short in western South Dakota. In July 1962, SAC had effectively rendered it obsolete by activating the 66th Strategic Missile Squadron, the first of three such units slated to operate 150 Minuteman I ICBMs under the 44 SMW. The 67th Strategic Missile Squadron joined the 44th in August, followed by the 68th Strategic Missile Squadron in September 1962.

On 1 June 1971, SAC inactivated the 821st Strategic Aerospace Division. By October of that year an upgraded Minuteman II also replaced earlier missiles.

Ellsworth soon became known as "The Showplace of SAC" as it continued to fight the Cold War by maintaining two legs of America's strategic triad: strategic bombardment and ICBMs. It carried out these vital missions for more than 15 years with relatively little change. Then, the 1980s brought many new challenges. In 1986 the base and the 28 BMW made extensive preparations to phase out the aging B-52 fleet and become the new home for the advanced B-1B Lancer. Contractors completed new unaccompanied enlisted dormitories in March, a new security police group headquarters in October, and gave Ellsworth's 13,497 foot runway a much-needed facelift. In addition, they completed new aircraft maintenance facilities for the complex new bird. The last 28 BMW B-52H left in early 1986. In January 1987, the wing received the first of 35 B-1B bombers.

The 12th Air Division moved to Ellsworth on 15 July 1988. This organization was responsible for training B-1B, transient B-52, and the 28th's KC-135 Stratotanker aircrews. Headquarters SAC activated a third wing, the 99th Strategic Weapons Wing, at Ellsworth on 10 August 1989. This wing assumed primary responsibility for B-1B and B-52 advanced aircrew training

Internationally, the destruction of the Berlin Wall in October 1989 symbolized the imminent demise of the Soviet Union over the next several months. During this transition the Air Force also had to reshuffle its organizations and resources to meet the diminishing, although shifting, threat. Changes came quickly. On 3 January 1990, SAC redesignated the 812th Combat Support Group as the 812th Strategic Support Wing (SSW), which, for a short time, became Ellsworth's fourth wing. The 812th SSW consolidated all combat support activities into one organization. On 31 July 1990 SAC replaced the 12th Air Division with the Strategic Warfare Center (SWC), which provided operational command and administrative control over Ellsworth's subordinate units. Then, as part of SAC's intermediate headquarters and base-level reorganization plan, on 1 September 1991, SAC renamed the 28 BMW the 28th Wing, the 44 SMW the 44th Wing and the 99 SWW the 99th Tactics and Training Wing. Ten days later SAC inactivated both the SWC and the 812th SSW. Once again the 28th became Ellsworth's host organization and it soon absorbed all previous 812th SSW functions. It was also during this period that, in acknowledgment of the elimination of the Warsaw Pact, the Secretary of Defense ordered alert operations to stand-down. The decades-long Cold War was over.
